Between 16 and 25 June 1951, construction work at Gross-Luebars airfield was in full swing. The laborers, who did not come from local construction firms, were transported to the field on trucks. Cement shipments which were expected had not yet arrived. A long approach lane was being cut through the woods. A tent camp occupied by an air force unit was located along this approach lane. Three wooden buildings were located in the tent camp. The construction of 25 additional barracks buildings was planned for future occupation. *

25X1A See [REDACTED] Comment. This information supplements a previous report. Previously, the airfield was used only temporarily by individual aircraft. No air unit was stationed there. It is not known what type of construction work is under way. It is possible that the field is being enlarged and that a concrete runway is being built.
